Trees for 21st Century Patch Program

It is more important than ever to protect our planet. Girl Scouts can get involved with help from EARTHNEXT, the nonprofit organization that provided 14,000 trees for Girl Scouts to plant nationwide for the 95th anniversary.

Perfect for the spring or leading up to Earth Day, EARTHNEXT's Trees for the 21st Century patch program gives Girl Scout volunteers all they need to know to engage girls in rewarding "green" activities.

Cost-effective at $3.50 per girl, the program provides tree seedlings and a unique patch for scouts to earn after completing the activities.

This easy-to-use tree planting and education toolkit connects girls to the wonders of trees and the outdoors. The kits include science-based activities designed for adults working with children and youth ages 6 to 18. As the children learn why and how to plant trees, activities reinforce the value and importance of ongoing care and encourage youth stewardship.

Kits come in different sizes and configurations including: Trees for the 21st Century patches, DVD, Activity Guide for Facilitators (by grade level), Tree Planting & Stewardship Guide, and seedling trees.

The Trees for the 21st Century patch features Dr. Wangari Maathai, awarded the Nobel Peace Prize and whose Greenbelt Movement has planted over 30 million trees in Kenya. She is an inspirational environmental leader and role model for girls. Learn with Trees for the 21st Century and help empower Girl Scouts to be environmental leaders!
